SPACE PROBE TAKES AMAZING PHOTO OF STONEHENGE

By MIKE FOSTER / Weekly World News

WASHINGTON — A U.S. space probe has taken a dramatic photo of a structure on the Red Planet even more baffling than the mysterious Face on Mars: A near duplicate of Stonehenge, the famed stone monument erected in Britain 4,000 years ago.

But incredibly, federal officials have yet to release the photo to the American public — even though the astonishing discovery was made more than 20 years ago!

That is the stunning charge of a leading mainstream astronomer who received the photo in the mail from an unnamed NASA source.

"This may well be the most important new finding in the history of space science — it is shocking that it has been withheld from our citizens," declared Prof. Leon Gerdy, who had the image examined and authenticated by five top experts in photography.

"The size and relative positions of these stones on Mars are virtually identical to those which make up Stonehenge.

"I estimate that the odds against such an alignment having occurred by chance are in the neighborhood of 75 billion to 1."

Until now, supporters of the theory that intelligent life once existed on the far-off planet have pointed most enthusiastically to the so-called Face on Mars, a 1.6-mile long structure which resembles a Sphinx-like human head.

A photo of the Face was taken in 1976 by the unmanned Viking orbiter over the region of Mars known as Cydonia.

"The Face on Mars was photographed from an altitude of more than 1,000 miles up and the resolution is poor," said Prof. Gerdy.

"By contrast, the newly uncovered photo, taken by the Viking I lander on ground level, clearly depicts an object incredibly similar to one we know exists on Earth.

"This is not only incontrovertible evidence that intelligent beings once inhabited Mars, it suggests that long ago they visited our world and left behind a structure that must, for them, have had a powerful cultural meaning."

When the Viking I lander touched down on the rocky red Chryse Plain of Mars on July 20, 1976, its principal mission was to study the planet's soil for signs of life.

However, the photo taken by the lander's rotating camera when pointed in a northeast direction captured something far more remarkable: A virtual dead ringer for one of Earth's oldest and best-known landmarks.

"The Martian structure is a collection of upright stones enclosed within a circle that appears to be approximately 300 feet in diameter," explained Prof. Gerdy.

"The outermost stones are a ring of monoliths about 13.5 feet high, some of them linked by horizontal beams.

"These are precisely the same dimensions as Stonehenge!"

The expert notes that the origins of England's mysterious Bronze Age structure are unknown.

"It's widely believed that Stonehenge was a Druid temple — however, historians have learned that the Druids did not arrive in Britain until about 250 B.C. — more than 1,700 years AFTER Stonehenge was constructed.

"Others have held that it was built by Roman, Danish or Saxon invaders — but those theories were all discredited too. The question 'Who were the makers of Stonehenge?' remains a riddle.

"We certainly have no proof that they WEREN'T Martian visitors."

What's more, he pointed out, experts can't explain how the multi-ton stones were transported many miles across the English countryside to where they stand on Salisbury Plain in Wiltshire — long before then-primitive Britons had invented the wheel.

"Some have hatched a theory that they moved the boul-

STONEHENGE, a 4,000-year-old monument in England, was NOT built by ancient Druids, as many believe.

ders using logs underneath as rollers, but this would be a nearly impossible task. However, for aliens with flying vehicles and tractor beams, assembling Stonehenge would have been child's play."

Intriguingly, in the '60s it was learned the positions of the megalithic stones can be used to measure the movements of the sun and moon, predict eclipses and make other astronomical calculations.

"But anthropologists have determined that the simple culture that existed in Britain at the time Stonehenge was created was just not sophisticated enough to have made these calculations," said the professor.

"It is much more consistent with the mentality of beings already familiar with astronomy and space travel."

Cursed kimono kills 100,000 in Japan!

A cursed kimono caused the death of more than 100,000 people, according to Japanese historians.

The chilling saga began in the 17th century, when a teenage girl was given the colorful kimono as a gift.

Tragically, she died before she could wear the garment and it was passed on to a friend.

The second girl, oddly enough, was another teen. Like clockwork, the third girl also died before ever wearing the killer kimono. In 1657, terrified family members finally took the deadly robe to a priest, who declared it "unlucky" and ritually burned it — hoping to end the curse forever. However, a freak gust of wind caused the flames to spread.

The blaze quickly turned into the Great Fire of Tokyo, which killed 100,000 people and left three quarters of the city in ruins!

NOW YOU CAN GET SICK FROM 'THIRD-HAND' SMOKE!

LYNN SKALMEN, above, and her husband Dale (shown in inset) are non-smokers — but both suffer smoking-related diseases from third-hand smoke he brings home from bar.

Woman plans $4M lawsuit over smoke hubby brought home from work!

PHILADELPHIA — Allergy sufferer Lynn Skalmen plans to sue two major tobacco companies for a whopping $4 million, claiming she's been made desperately ill — by third-hand smoke!

Mrs. Skalmen contends that, even though both she and her musician husband Dale are non-smokers, the smoke from other people's cigarettes accumulates on him during his job as a piano bar musician. When he comes home, the residue triggers her allergies.

Mrs. Skalmen, 51, says that Skalmen, one of the city's most popular lounge entertainers, is forced by the nature of his work to be exposed to second-hand smoke in hotel bars. The smoke seeps into his clothes, hair and skin.

The ailing woman claims that being near him causes her nausea, eye irritation, shortness of breath and severe psychological problems.

"I'm usually asleep when Dale comes home, but I wake up as soon as he walks in the house," says Mrs. Skalmen. "The smoke residue comes off him. It chokes me and makes me so sick I sometimes can't even get out of bed in the morning. I've missed so many workdays that my job is in jeopardy.

"I love my husband very much, but I'm afraid I'll have to leave him if the situation doesn't improve. Having to see his life ruined is terrible — anxiety and depression.

"Even if he were to never go near cigarettes again in his life, so much damage has been done to me, physically and mentally, that I'll never be completely well."

Doctors confirm that third-hand smoke, although it gets little publicity, can be very harmful to allergy-prone people like Mrs. Skalmen.

"Residue of nicotine and other carcinogens from tobacco smoke is still there. Having to see life ruined can cause terrible anxiety and depression.

"Even when those carcinogens are on the clothes or skin of another person, they can wreak havoc on the immune system of the allergy prone."

Many legal experts believe Mrs. Skalmen has an excellent chance of winning her suit.

"The case is really on tobacco companies these days," said one prominent Philadelphia attorney. "The temper of the times gives a case like this a big advantage. The companies may even settle out of court to avoid a lengthy legal battle. If they do, Mrs. Skalmen could collect at least a million dollars.

"And worse for Big Tobacco, her successful litigation could cause other third-hand smoke sufferers to sue as well."

Driven to drink? Read this:

Motorists repeatedly convicted of drunk driving would be forced to install special bright red license plates like this one on their cars, according to a bill recently introduced in the California legislature.

Proponents of the law say the distinctive plates would warn other drivers to steer clear of the drunk's auto — and the humiliation of being "tagged" as a booze 'n' cruiser would be an added deterrent.

Self-help books can DESTROY your marriage!

By GAIL DWYER
Weekly World News

Want to make love last? Then ignore marital self-help books and follow your own instincts!

That's the surprising new recommendation from author and marriage expert Judy Pearson.

"A lot of books claim basic rules make marriages work," said Miss Pearson, a recognized authority on family relations. "But when you look at couples who've had happy marriages for over 50 years, you find that following those simple rules isn't the key to their success at all."

For example, many experts say talking honestly with your partner is a main ingredient to a happy marriage. They also recommend not ignoring disagreements or they'll fester.

But these bits of advice are hogwash according to Miss Pearson, author of Lasting Love: What Keeps Couples Together.

"I found wonderful marriages that defied these arguments," she said. "Successful couples can ignore a problem or have a distorted way of talking about it and it doesn't sour their relationship.

"Dragging the problem into the open to talk candidly about it would be a recipe for disaster."

Miss Pearson also found that plenty of happy couples don't always try to see things from their partner's point of view. They often deny their problems. They convince themselves that their partner's faults are actually assets. And they're not always fair to each other.

But these couples succeed because they genuinely love each other and are too darned stubborn to give up when the going gets tough.

"People make marriages last in their own way," said Miss Pearson, an expert in interpersonal communications. "In the end, old-fashioned love is more powerful than any expert advice."

Cute babies get more love than ugly ones, says study!

Cute babies get more love and attention from their mothers than less attractive babies do!

That's the sad and startling finding of a brand-new study by researcher Jean Ritter. The study, done at an Austin, Texas, hospital, compared the behavior of 47 new moms who had attractive firstborn babies with 47 mothers who had not-so-cute firstborns.

The cuter infants got more affection from their moms than the homely ones. The moms held them more and cooed to them more, saying things like, "Hi, cute baby. You're such a cute baby."

The "cuteness" of the children was determined by independent judges

First child conceived in space!

MOSCOW — Russian scientists have disclosed the birth of the first child ever conceived in space — an infant with a giant head who has developed four times as fast as normal and has a super-keen intelligence!

By BEATRICE DEXTER
Weekly World News

The baby boy, Vladimir, is the child of cosmonaut Valentina Ureschkov, who became pregnant during a two-month orbital flight around Earth. Baffled scientists still can't explain how Valentina and three other members of her all-female crew became pregnant during the mission.

Her three companions spontaneously aborted their fetuses shortly after the mission ended, but Valentina's child came into the world alive and healthy on May 31 — after a gestation period of just nine weeks.

Because his lungs are slightly underdeveloped, he is currently confined to an incubator.

Intellectually, the infant seems far superior to the average baby, scientists say. He has already learned to sit up, roll over and speak simple sentences.

"He is advancing so rapidly that he is already the intellectual equivalent of the average 3-year-old," said Dr. Viktor Nikolaiev, one of several specialists who are looking after the space baby.

"Because the origin of the pregnancy is a mystery, we're obviously relieved that the child is essentially humanoid in appearance. We're looking into the possibility that the pregnancy is some sort of bizarre effect of the space experience.

"But there does remain the possibility that the mother might have been impregnated by some sort of space being without her knowledge.

"The child's strange head and abnormally advanced development are yet to be explained."

Little Vladimir was conceived during a secret mission that began March 3 and returned to Earth two months later.

During the mission, all four women reported feelings of "warmth and ecstasy" that may have been related to the conception of their babies, scientists said.

None of the women was pregnant at the time the spaceflight was launched, doctors said.

"This is Mme Ureschkov's first child, so naturally she has a close bond with him," Dr. Nikolaiev said.

JIM CARREY LOOK–ALIKE ANGRY OVER MISTAKEN IDENTITY!

'Looking like this clown has made my life hell!'

By ANN VICTORIA / Weekly World News

DES MOINES, Iowa — Delivery truck driver Mike Chamlin is just an ordinary working stiff. But everywhere he goes, people gawk and hound him for autographs — because he's a dead ringer for rubber-faced comedy actor Jim Carrey!

Not a day goes by that someone doesn't stop, do a double take and yell, "Hey, Jimmy boy, let's hear you say, 'Well, all righty then.' " — a line the famous over-actor is known for.

Chamlin, 33, says his life has been "sheer hell" since Carrey's emergence as a megastar in 1994's Ace Ventura: Pet Detective. His girlfriend, Diane Rastenni, 30, describes Chamlin as a shy, stay-at-home, with a dry, subtle sense of humor who rarely goes to movies. The restaurant owner on his delivery route say he's a quiet, reserved young man — the exact opposite of the wild and wacky Carrey.

GIRLFRIEND Diane Rastenni loves Mike for his shy, sweet nature — not for Jim Carrey looks.

Chamlin himself agrees. "After hundreds of people told me I looked like this guy, I finally went to see one of his movies called The Mask, he says. "I hated it. It was so frantic and hysterical. All that noise ... I'm those rare occasions when I go to films, I prefer intellectual foreign films."

Chamlin says he first started to hear about his resemblance to Carrey way back in 1990, but he didn't think much about it.

"Every now and then someone would say, 'Hey, you look just like that guy on In Living Color,' Chamlin says. "I just shrugged and went on with my life — until 1994.

"Then all of a sudden I literally couldn't go out in public anymore. Everywhere I went, people were pulling on me, telling me how funny I am. And it's gotten worse every year as this guy gets more and more popular. The worst part of it all is that they not only want to get my autograph, they also want to see me do routines. 'Do the thing from the Riddler in Batman,' they'll ask me. Or, 'Do the courtroom scene in Liar Liar.'

"Everybody gets mad at me when I say no. But I can't do Jim Carrey. My voice doesn't even sound like his."

Miss Rastenni says she's gotten used to pals finding her, saying, 'How's it feel to be dating a celebrity?'

"I love Mike just as he is. He's the greatest guy in the world. I just wish we could go on one date and not have some joker yell, 'Somebody stop me!' "

NO AUTOGRAPHS, PLEASE: Spitting image Mike Chamlin, left, is not a Jim Carrey fan and gets very annoyed when countless patrons mistake him for the superstar comedian at right.

Ladybug Brings Luck... Riches

Experience Wonderful Changes ... Fast

Nothing attracts more good luck than the lady bug. And now, for the first time ever, you can get one... perfectly preserved ... in a unique pin-of-gold.

While on a trip to far-away lands, I met some villagers who receive everything they need in life through "good luck." They attract this incredible good fortune by placing a lady bug on their collar.

All around them are poor folks. But these people enjoy lives fit for kings and queens ...with gold, jewels, good health and most important...peace.

Good Fortune For You

I became fascinated with the lady bug story - and set out to make them available to people just like you ... people who can use a little good luck in their life.

After months of searching, I discovered a secret garden... filled with thousands of beautiful, red lady bugs. At harvest time, they are hand picked... brought to a special location... and prepared for production.

Only the brightest colored are chosen. These always seem to attract the most luck.

Then ... each one is set in a stunning, pin-of-gold ... perfectly preserved... ready to be worn on your collar.

Thousands of people around the world already have one (or more). They wear them to attract money, success, opportunity and good health.

"Lady Bug carries on her wings, love, luck and all good things."

Lately while picking her little minkbeast. Her whole life changed... overnight. And the success stories go on and on.

Others wear it to attract love and romance. While still others have attained a life of luxury and job advancement, large pay raises, improved business and better health.

One girl wears the pin just because it was so different. "Happiness" followed her wherever she went.

Gift Of Nature

Those who wear a lady bug wonder why it attracts so many good things. Personally, I believe it's because it's a gift of nature. And where you keep it close to you ... good luck follows.

But is it worth the $19.95 I'm going to ask you to send me?

Look at it this way: What if it brought you just one stroke of good luck? What would it be worth to you? What if it brought you good fortune many times over?

"WISHES CAN COME TRUE"

WEEKLY WORLD NEWS EXCLUSIVE

By NICK MANN

WASHINGTON — Fearing national and world panic, the federal government is working around the clock to suppress Bible prophecies that prove the world is coming to an end on or before May 13, 2000!

And far from apologizing, CIA and FBI sources insist that the measures, though drastic, "are absolutely necessary to maintain control over citizens who are bound to quit their jobs, abandon their families and run wild in the streets once they realize the world is, in fact, coming to an end."

That reasoning doesn't sit well with Bible scholars and clergymen, many of whom are calling upon President Bill Clinton to put a stop to what some are calling "a conspiracy calculated to rob Americans of their spiritual free will."

"The world is coming to an end and if the federal government gets its way, nobody will know until it is too late to do anything about it," declared Dr. Robert Caltor, author of the important new book, Paradise Walking — What You MUST Do to Live Forever.

"I don't mean to imply that you can outwit God and survive the End Times in human form," he continued. "But if you know what is happening, and you have the courage to give your life to God as we approach the year 2000, then you can secure that He reserves a place for you in Heaven.

"Christians — true Christians — are aware of the desperate times we live in and are already secure in the knowledge that they have done what is necessary to get right with God.

"But millions of people in America, and billions in the world, are lost sheep. Bible prophecy could open their eyes and give them the motivation they need to save themselves.

"By suppressing these prophecies, the government of the United States is, in effect, doing the Devil's work. It is more than an outrage, more than criminal — it is pure evil in action."

Nobody in Washington is talking, least of all the White House, FBI and CIA. According to Dr Callie and other sources in the religious community, those two agencies are orchestrating the so-called End Times Cover-up, which began in earnest this past May.

Those sources say the initiative is being spearheaded by CIA and FBI operatives who are methodically contacting high-profile scholars and clergymen nationwide, urging them to avoid discussing End Times prophecies until the government can come up with a plan to keep the country from collapsing "under the weight of the panic and hysteria that is bound to prevail when people realize they have no future."

Here, according to Dr Callie, are the prophecies that the federal government has decided "are too hot for the public to handle."

They are based on Bible passages and interpretations from some of the world's leading Bible experts, he said.

● The evil Anti-Christ mentioned so prominently in the Bible's Book of Revelation is not only alive, he's living in the United States.

His name remains a closely guarded, "eyes only" secret in the intelligence community, but sources confirm that he is an extremely wealthy businessman who is amassing a private army of thought-control experts and Satanic "ministers-for" to begin his assault on mankind any day now.

By 1998, at least 666 million Americans will wear the Bible's "Mark of the Beast," the evil number 666, on their wrists as orders from the Anti-Christ.

● China will become the most hated nation on Earth early next year, when millions of armed troops invade and then occupy countries throughout Southeast Asia and as far west as India and Pakistan.

The threat of world domination becomes real, and cold war tensions rise to levels not seen since the days when the Soviet Union and United States were at odds in the early 1960s.

● Six signs that prove the world is coming to an end will appear throughout the world over the next four years, the sudden rise in volcanic activity and serious earthquakes, unprecedented flooding in the United States, the disintegration of the Soviet Union, the return of Jesus to Israel after World War II, and spread of the AIDS virus-are, in fact, proof that the End Times are here.

● As prophesied in the Bible, the moon will turn red. And in a big secret report, astronomers say that a cloud of red "space dust" covered our solar system in 1991. This dust will pass between Earth and the moon, causing the moon to "turn red" as early as Christmas Day, 1997.

● The Battle of Armageddon will start with China and Iraq attacking Israel on May 3, 2000. Almost nuclear war will follow, and all nations with military capability will be involved in the conflict. The 10-day battle will result in "the end of all things" on May 13.

● The only way to protect yourself and your family from the Apocalypse is to give up your life to God before the end comes. This will require what scholars call "a total conversion" in spiritual life — an immersion that, clearly, requiring "spiritual immersion," as the Bible points out in clearly and absolutely there are five words pro-

HOLLYWOOD'S ANSWER GIRL

Q I've had a crush on very Jenny McCarthy ever since I first saw her co-hosting MTV's lip dating show Singled Out. Is it true that there are some kind of weird photos circulating showing her on the potty — and if so, how can I get ahold of them?

— Leon C., Boulder, Colo.

A The hedonistic blonde recently did a bit for Diesel's ad campaign for candid shots. One photo shows the curvy cutie squatting to scrub a toilet while decked out in a man's undershirt and high heels. Another shot, dreamed up by Madison Avenue whiz kids, has Jenny perched on the john with her panties down around her calves. But the outrageous ads may be hard to find — several magazines including Vogue and Cosmopolitan refused to run them.

Q Say it ain't so! Was Sean Connery, who was many hundreds of bad guys as the original James Bond, joined those liberals who want to take away our guns?

— Bart H., Little Rock, Ark.

A The former 007 is indeed a strong supporter of gun control. The Scottish actor made an TV ad for anti-gun legislators backed by relatives of the victims in Dunblane, Scotland, who were gunned down in a mad shooting.

Q I thought supermodel Cindy Crawford was an upstanding married young woman. Was she really spotted on a nude beach, flaunting her gorgeous naked body?

— Eric C., Atlanta, Ga.

A Hide your eyes, Cindy was only TOPLESS when she was snapped by photogs on the Caribbean island of St. Martin earlier this year. But she was drinking with a male companion — who was stark naked. The hot mate hung out there has been identified as Cindy's old flame Randy Gerber. The owner of a chain of bars she dated before her rise dished dirt on her to actor Richard Gere.

TOPLESS? — YES
BOTTOMLESS? — NO

Q I was confused to hear that musician actress Linda Hamilton, who starred in Terminator 1 and II, was getting married just six days after she gave birth to her baby. Isn't that a bit soon?

— Gina F., Oakland, Calif.

A Lovely Linda, who portrayed machine-like warrior in the sci-fi thriller movies, was in labor for 36 hours before she delivered her baby girl. Hamilton, who is married to director James Cameron, said: "I was bleeding like crazy. They ran over to me screaming, 'You're bleeding to death.' Then they wheeled me and ran away," says the embarrassed star.

"It took forever to get rid of that stink. That's the last stunk I try to help."

Q Movie legend Errol Flynn is my favorite star of all time. Is it true that the late actor was a direct descendant of Captain Blood, the pirate he played on the silver screen?

— Bob T., Boston, Mass.

A Captain Blood was just a fictional character, but swashbuckling Flynn WAS a lineal descendant of Fletcher Christian, the hero who led a shipboard uprising against the cruel Captain Bligh, immortalized in the classic film, Mutiny on the Bounty.

He even portrayed Christian in a 1933 Australian version of the sea yarn — three years before Clark Gable starred in the Hollywood version.

Q Was star trek slapper William Shatner involved in a terrible car accident that left him shaking and required help from 911?

— George D., Springfield, Mass.

A The accident was a bit less dramatic than that. Actually, it's a Captain Kirk hit a skunk with his car — then when he got out to try and help the animal it sprayed him.

Panicked Shatner called 911, then doused himself with gallons of tomato juice to kill the smell.

When paramedics arrived on the scene they thought the stink

Racehorse pees on fat-cat Arab Sheik!

DOHA, Qatar — Fat-cat Arab sheik Ahmed Hadi al-Dennarni is demanding that one of the world's most magnificent racehorses be put to death — because the thoughtless thoroughbred peed all over him!

Horrified eyewitnesses said the spectacular Japanese racehorse Hidashi Kai actually lifted one leg like a dog and urinated smack in the bewildered billionaire's face.

"Some horses do that, they lift their leg to spray like a male dog, and that's just what Hidashi Kai did," said the colt's jolted owner and trainer Tadaaki Kuga.

"But unfortunately, Ali washed the sheik good — his beard, his hair, flowing robes, everything.

"The man was so angry, if he could have gotten to Hidashi Kai, he would have killed him right there on the spot."

The haughty Saudi oilman got a mouthful of pony pee as he and other visiting bigwigs attended a series of international races in this Persian Gulf nation May 10.

"All the rich Arabs from Qatar, Dubai and Saudi Arabia were sitting in fancy box seats right down below us, so close to the track they could almost reach out and touch the horses," recalled British businessman and sportsman Orin Radani, 63.

"The horses were on the track for the feature race and were parading past the grandstand when the Japanese entrant, No. 8, suddenly stopped right in front of the bigshots' box, bounced his leg and let fly. And the old boy really let loose a stream, too.

"Almost immediately, I heard cries of indignation coming from the VIP section and saw this incredible commotion down there. And when I stood up to get a better look, I could see Sheik Ahmed wiping the urine off his face and then leaping out his robes as everybody around him sat there looking stunned.

"And I thought right then, 'Man, this is one of the richest and most powerful people in the world — and also one of the most arrogant — so there's going to be hell to pay before this thing's over.'"

And Radani was right. Flunky Hidashi Kai went on to win the race by more than four lengths, but outraged Ahmed, 54, quickly filed a petition to have the horse impounded and destroyed.

"This would not be a problem in most place else on the planet, but in this part of the world, the sheiks usually get their way," said Hidashi Kai's terrified trainer. "And because of that, my colt and I do not know what fate awaits him.

"But I will fight to the end to save him to death. After all, Hidashi Kai was only doing what comes naturally.

RICH KIDS AREN'T AS HAPPY AS YOU THINK!

Young people who inherit huge fortunes and never have to work are a lot less happy than you might think — in fact, many spend their lives vainly looking for happiness, says an expert.

"The more money you are given, the less happy you're apt to be," declares researcher John Sedgwick, author of the book Rich Kids.

"That's especially true of wealthy children who inherit such vast sums of money that they never have to support themselves. The majority are bored, depressed and disenchanted.

"Rich kids lead strange and isolated childhoods and go on an endless, fruitless search for happiness."

Sedgwick — himself a member of a wealthy old Boston family — interviewed 87 young members of such famous affluent families as the Rockefellers, Fairbanks and Pillsburys for his book.

Here's what he found:

● Rich kids have superficial relations with brothers and sisters. "In a middle class family, brothers and sisters are close because they share many common experiences. It's very different for rich kids."

● They grow up isolated from their parents. "Rich kids are often raised by nannies."

● Rich kids spend their childhoods imprisoned in a golden ghetto. "The typical rich kid's family home is cut off from the world as an armed camp," he said.

● Rich kids are embarrassed by their wealth. "Being rich without reason makes them feel guilty."

● They don't get any sympathy for their problems. "Even serious illness doesn't get them a helping hand."

Sedgwick's book is published by Doubleday.

It's the art of living wise is the art of knowing what to overlook.

BAD HAIR DAY!

Gal dies from heat exhaustion — after blow drying her hair for two and a half hours!

CRIME SCENE photograph shows Laura slumped on the floor with blowdryer beside her. The police first treated the case as a possible homicide

By MARK FOSTER

NEW YORK — College coed Laura Salerni died from heat exhaustion — after using a blow dryer for two and a half hours!

The big-haired blonde keeled over in the bathroom, tripped into a coma and never recovered, authorities have determined.

"This is a tragedy that didn't have to happen," said a hospital spokesperson. "If Miss Salerni had only consumed a single glass of water while attending to her hair, she would be alive today."

Beauticians, fitness and nutrition experts are the panicked answer to Laura's untimely demise at her home and have all issued warnings against ever blow drying hair for more than 30 minutes without an hour's break.

Laura was found pale after getting the worst perm of her young life, according to a close friend.

"We'd shower at the gym after aerobics class and she'd refuse to work out. Her hair was perfect — which might explain why it was so important."

Laura always saw her stylist, a Del Mar native who charged $75 for a wash, cut and blow dry, every other week.

On the night of the big event, Laura had taken over the home of Miss Salerni's parents on New York's Long Island. She was preparing for a "big" regular date.

When I called Laura at 8 o'clock, she said she was just starting to get to work on her hair," said the friend.

"She was really excited about the new cut. I'd liked her so much, so I knew she was going to spend extra time on it."

Laura's mother, who had left home to run errands, returned to find her daughter unconscious on the floor with the blow dryer still running.

"She might as well have been out in the middle of the desert."

A complicating factor in the unusual case was that Miss Salerni engaged in a vigorous workout just prior to the fatal incident, noted the spokesman.

"That and the extensive blow drying were a deadly combination."

STUDENT Laura Salerni in 1993 photograph was very proud of her hair and would spend countless hours blow drying her mane to perfection. Ironically, her vanity resulted in her tragic death.

Cannibals hire public relations firm to improve their image!

DENPASAR, Indonesia — The public relations firm hired last year by an aboriginal tribe to improve the image of cannibalism is running up against a catchy slogan. "Long pig — the OTHER white meat."

Long pig is the politically correct term for human flesh, explained a spokesman for the firm, whose goal is to eradicate the "stigma" against cannibalism and make it a matter of choice. But the slogan confused many Europeans tourists who were surprised they might become the main ingredient of the new gourmet meals.

In fact, the last surprise of the meat comes from tribe members who've died of natural causes. Coroners in the Fiji town, Jakob Subardy and Ali Mahmoud, have ruled that [illegible]

SPARTANBURG, S.C. — An amazing photograph snapped by a South Carolina bird-watcher is believed to be the first ever taken of Siamese twin angels.

KIDS OUGHTA BE REWARDED FOR DUMPING FOOD ON THEIR HEADS!

I'm madder than Chef Boy-Ar-Dee without a can opener about my crazy wife Thelma Jean going to cooking school!

Here we've been married over 40 years and NOW she decides to learn how to cook a meal fit for human consumption.

Problem is, she's experimenting on me and the family, by crying out loud.

Last Friday she cooked up some limey, shimmery spaghetti recipe straight from Italy.

Now I know why the Roman Empire fell. All their soldiers died of indigestion after eating crap like this.

You gotta give it to those Eyetalians, though. Not many people can make a lethal weapon out of tomato sauce.

Anyway, things got out of hand when my 3-year-old grandson Butch stuffed his fat little face with a forkful of Thelma Jean's gastric concoction.

Now all Butch, he takes after Uncle Orville and gets pig-killing mad if he doesn't like something — and man, there was no way he could like this stuff.

So he takes his whole bowl of spaghetti and dumps it on his head and starts screaming like hell.

Hey, after taking a bite of the stuff I was going to do the same thing if he hadn't done it first. By jiminy.

Let's face it, folks. For a kid who usually eats M&Ms and Twinkies for supper, this whole spaghetti thing was cruel and unusual punishment in my book, so I don't blame him one bit for dumping the bowl on his head.

But that got Thelma Jean howling like things and my hard-butt daughter-in-law Sandy was gonna pop Butch with some rolled-up newspaper before I stepped in.

Now I'm a firm believer in the spare-the-rod and spoil the child school of thought — but I'll be dammed if I'm gonna smack a kid who's just doing what comes natural to him.

And dumping Thelma Jean's spaghetti on his head was the smartest thing I've ever seen that kid do.

In fact, more people ought to do it when somebody throws pea soup in front of them and calls it food. Supply restaurants would get the idea real quick if angry customers dumped grub they didn't like on their heads.

And a lot of lazy wives would start spending more time in the kitchen and less time on their butts in front of the TV if their husbands would dump their dinner on their heads when the stuff tastes like it belongs in a dog dish.

Anyway, I cleaned the spaghetti off Butch and took him to get some ice cream as a reward for speaking his mind. He's a chip off the old block, by golly.

And all this just goes to show that women ought be required to take cooking classes from elementary school to the 12th grade.

Maybe then ugly little scenes like this wouldn't happen.

Ed Anger

If women learned how to cook better, ugly scenes like this wouldn't happen!

NEW YORK GAL IS A HUMAN FLEABAG!

By ALEX MORGAN

NEW YORK CITY — Betsy Workel is a human fleabag — the pretty 32-year-old has a rare skin disorder that attracts fleas to her by the thousands!

And there's nothing she can do about it except wear specially made flea collars that are safe for humans 21 hours a day, seven days a week.

"The flea collars save my life," Miss Workel said. "I'll never take them off for any reason. The fleas simply all over my body and drive me crazy.

The fleas attack Miss Workel because she has one of the world's rarest skin disorders. The affects about one of every 50 million Americans. The condition is called Dermatosis Lupigia (lupus) after the two researchers who discovered it in 1900. Miss Workel's case may be the worst on record.

Dr. Nelson Reiman

"Even when I'm at my parents' with a bodyguard sitting by the door I'm covered with fleas that are not there. The nurses and doctors at the hospital where I'm a patient all think I'm crazy.

"I've had to move to a new apartment every six months because the fleas drive me crazy," said Betsy Workel. "I live in a nice apartment that I keep clean and the doctors say my personal hygiene is not part of the problem."

Girl, 12, sells her body — for a belly-button ring!

SASSY Daniella S. wanted belly ring so badly she sold her body for money

By JOE BERGER

LOS ANGELES — Spoiled schoolgirl Daniella S., 12, wanted a diamond-studded belly ring in the worst way, but her miffed, middle-class parents refused to buy her one. So determined Daniella earned the money herself — by selling her body on the street.

The shameless seventh grader admitted selling sex to middle-aged men at Sun Valley Park, a seedy spot in the middle-class suburb filled with scores of apparent creeps and perverts looking for a thrill.

The sassy, slim brunette bragged to prostitutes ages 30 and older that she was a virgin little runaway just looking for a quick cash. She would tell horny johns she was 18.

"I wanted that belly ring more than anything, and no one around would get it for me — so I figured the only way I could get the money was to sell my body," Daniella told a reporter.

Dear Dottl: I love my best friend Jimmy like a brother but I get sick of him bragging about his sexual exploits with women. Week after week he bores me with tales from his bedroom. I've told him that I don't care about his womanizing, but Jimmy just scoffs and keeps right on telling his stories. Why does he do this, Dottl? If I understood what motivates him, I might be able to tolerate it. — Jay in Benson

Dear Dottl: My parents raised me as a vegetarian and it wasn't until I got married a few months ago that I discovered the joys of eating meat — and lots of it. I didn't want to tell my parents for fear of upsetting them. Unfortunately, my wife and I went to their house for dinner over the holidays and stupidly smuggled in a few pork chops in a plastic dish. Dear Dottl: I'm so scared and confused that I don't know what to do. My Dad and I bought Mom a little wiener dog for Mother's Day to replace Molly, another wiener dog that died at the age of 11. Mom really loved Molly and she was devastated until she got that puppy. One day she asked me to feed it while she was at work. I don't know how I did it, but I grabbed a bag of rat pellets instead of dog food — and poured it in the puppy's bowl. Needless to say, the pellets were poison — and the puppy died. Now I don't know what to do, Dottl. Should I tell her the truth or leave them see the light" — [illegible] in Los Angeles

I loved children — until I had eight of my own!

Dear Dottl: When I was younger, I absolutely adored children. I went out of my way to be around them and I even studied early childhood education before I got pregnant with twins and dropped out of school. That was 11 long years ago and now eight kids later, I've finally wised up. Kids are nothing but hungry mouths and screaming lungs. If I could get them out of my life once and for all, I'd be the happiest woman in the world. Kids are the pits, Dottl! They suck up all your money and ruin your life. — Susan in Pennington

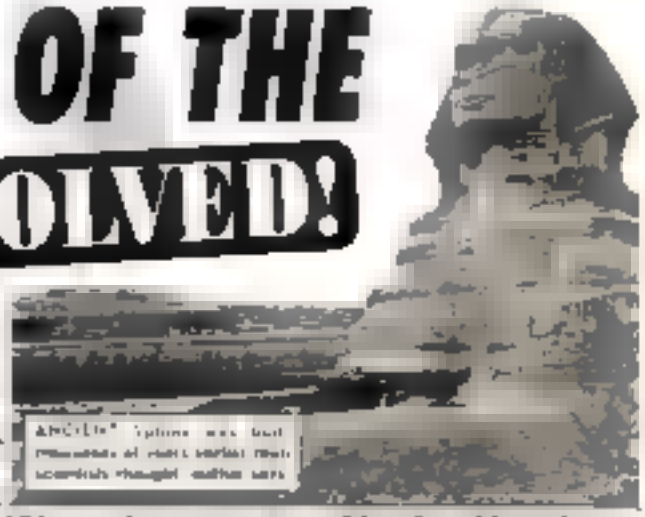
MYSTERY OF THE SPHINX SOLVED!

By ELAINE ROBERTS, Weekly World News



ANCIENT: Sphinx was built thousands of years earlier than scientists thought, author says

Lost civilization actually built the ancient wonder in Egypt, expert says

The great Sphinx that guards the pyramids ■ Cheops and Chephren was not built by the Egyptians, as widely believed — it was created thousands of years earlier by survivors of the fabled Lost Continent of Atlantis!

That's the astonishing claim of [redacted] archaeologist Dr. Carl Lasher. [redacted] believes the [redacted] half-man, half-beast statue came on the scene nearly 15,000 years ago.

Until now, virtually all archaeologists [redacted] believed the Sphinx was constructed in about 2500 B.C. and that it bears the facial features of the Pharaoh Chephren.

But Dr. Lasher is convinced the mysterious monument is far too eroded by wind storms and time to have been built only 4,500 years ago.

His examination of the monument's structure indicates that it was created at least 14,000 years earlier.

"From what we know of the technical abilities of the ancient Egyptians, it's simply impossible to believe they could have produced the Sphinx at that time," he said.

He notes that the Sphinx and the two adjacent pyramids reflect "significantly different" architectural styles.

"The only possible explanation is that the Sphinx was constructed by an earlier civilization that vanished without a trace — and the lost civilization that comes most readily to mind is Atlantis!"

But Cairo-based Egyptologist Dr. Mohammed Al-Sharif is scornful of Dr. Lasher's theories, branding them "nonsense garbage" in a recent newspaper article.

"We have older stone-[redacted] come from," he said. "They absolutely weren't [redacted] a fabulous utopia with a highly advanced civilization that was utterly demolished in an earthquake, leaving no trace. The so-called "Lost Continent" has been searched for by dreamers and adventurers for centuries.

Pot smokers wanted for scientific study!

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. — Researchers at Bowman Gray School of Medicine are looking for 20 regular marijuana smokers who want to get high at the government's expense" and earn big bucks for doing it!

The scientists are conducting a federally funded study and need to find out more about the effects of pot.

Volunteers will be provided with free marijuana cigarettes and will be paid $25 for each of four test sessions.

Only smokers who currently get regularly will participate, because researchers don't want to encourage anyone to begin using the drug, a spokesman said.

Robots to care for the elderly

TOKYO — Japanese scientists are closer to unveiling their most remarkable invention yet: A robot that takes care of the elderly!

The 20-inch-square nurse can recognize a human face, follow verbal commands and even bring oldsters their food.

The robot is the product of a six-year effort by the government and several major manufacturers, including Toshiba. Inventors say the mechanical marvel will be especially helpful in retirement homes. It is equipped with a navigational system to guide it from room to room, a monitor to inform patients of what's on the day's menu and a mechanical arm to carry food trays.

Doc fined $550,000 for burning man's penis with cleaning fluid!

By JACK ALEXANDER

MINEOLA, N.Y. — A blundering doc was ordered to pay a mechanic $550,000 because she mistakenly soaked his penis with a cleaning fluid instead of vinegar — causing him unbearable pain and messing up his manhood.

"He was engaged at the time and it has been a rocky road for them ever since," said Daniel O'Toole the lawyer for the 37 year-old patient, who wasn't identified. "Their sex life has been greatly diminished."

The mechanic went to the dermatology clinic at the State University of New York at Stony Brook in 1992 to have a genital wart eradicated.

The eradication called for a vinegar soap — a procedure in which vinegar is poured into certain areas which of then wrapped around the penis.

Normally a painless procedure, the wrap helps doctors find hard to spot warts by turning them white.

But instead of reaching for the vinegar, Dr Sheryl Pinsgold grabbed an unlabeled bottle of TBQ a permanent detergent used to clean hospital floors and poured it on the penis.

Minutes later the man was in excruciating pain with second degree burns on his penis and testicles.

Supreme Court jurors in Mineola grimaced when shown a graphic video and huge blown up photos in court of the man's "blackened charred and swollen penis" O'Toole said.

"It was disgusting. The jurors were literally gasping," the lawyer said.

The mechanic sued Dr Pinsgold for malpractice in 1994 saying he suffered loss of sensation and physical problems making erection and orgasm difficult.

Now his fiancee testified about her loss of intimacy and affection.

The state Supreme Court found the doctor liable for negligence in June 1996 and the jury put a price tag on the negligence $300,000, plus $94,000 interest accrued since the 1994 judgment.

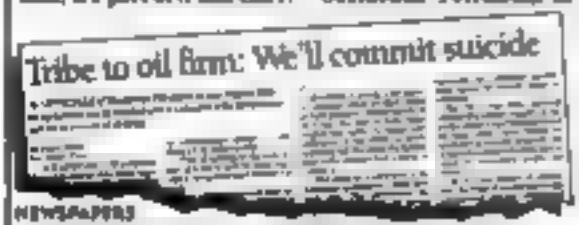
Indian tribe threatens suicide — if oil company drills on their land!

By JASON TRIPP / Weekly World News

BOGOTA, Colombia — A jungle tribe of 5,000 Indians has threatened to leap off a mountain to their death if an oil company drills new wells on their land in the wilderness.

"This oil belongs to the land, it's part of it and can't be taken out," says Roberto Cubarta, council chief of the semi-nomadic U'wa tribe.

Occidental Petroleum of Los Angeles was planning to crank up the drills for some exploratory work earlier this year. But the tribe threatened to commit mass suicide as many of their ancestors did in the 17th century in protest against Spanish colonization.



NEWSPAPERS around the world have been reporting this potential tragedy.

Oil company bigwigs don't know whether the threat is a publicity stunt or not, but they've not shown to roll the tribe's bluff and risk world criticism.

The U'was have exhausted all legal claim to the land, which lies outside their reservation. But they maintain the land is theirs because it lies in their migratory path. The Colombian courts have already ruled against the tribe.

Government officials side with Occidental because oil exploration by foreign companies has dropped as a result of guerrilla wars and narcotics terrorism and Colombia needs their business.

The government hopes to convince the tribe not to

FLYING SAUCER MYSTERY!

New York women claim to have rock solid proof that ETs exist

By LUKE HUNTER / Weekly World News

ALBANY, N.Y. — Three women who claim they have undeniable photographic proof of space aliens have taken their case to media outlets all over the country, space experts across the nation — and even the highest reaches of U.S. government!

In fact, Elaine Cooperstein, Jane Velten and Doris Ragsdale have quit their jobs to devote themselves full time to their UFO encounters. And they're driving a lot of people crazy.

"We received as many as 10 faxes in a day from these women," said an editor for a New York City newspaper. "I have a reporter who says he has gotten a dozen calls to an afternoon from them, detailing every little UFO-related experience they have."

ENLARGEMENT of UFOs in photo held at right

UFO CRUSADERS. Cheerwoman, Jane Velten, Doris Ragsdale and Elaine Cooperstein are devoted to alien encounters.

And soon taking the eye-opening photo on April 11, the women's lives have become one UFO sighting after another.

Miss Velten has kept a diary of her UFO experiences, which include 14 sightings in her backyard during the first week of May, a UFO allegedly chasing her car on May 4, and a space alien rummaging through her office on May 10. In all, she has recorded 157 contacts.

And each time something happens she promptly reports it to newspapers all over the U.S. using the fax machine she ladies bought solely for that purpose.

Mrs. Ragsdale claims to have had dinner with three space aliens, and she says the creatures have called her on her home telephone 11 times. She claims the aliens have vowed to return to her home on July 1 and she has been begging every television network to cover the event live.

"These women are like neighbors who are always [illegible] and he identified. "Their original photo may have some validity but if these women think you're interested in them, they won't leave you alone."

The photo shows three UFOs flying above a residential area outside Albany. No one has been able to explain what the photo could possibly be, and the women are convinced it shows visitors from another galaxy.

"These space aliens clearly have targeted Jane and Doris and me," said Mrs. Cooperstein. "I have seen space aliens following me more than 45 times during the month of May but I haven't actually had personal contact with one of them yet. My time will come, though."

Mrs. Cooperstein, who took the original photo, has launched a massive letter-writing campaign that includes daily updates sent to every congressman and senator and President Bill Clinton.

"I hope they're paying attention to us because we're about to blow the lid off one of the biggest mysteries of all time," she said. "These space aliens clearly have picked us three women from New York as their headquarters here on Earth."

High percentage of captured dolphins are toothless!

COOKTOWN, Australia — Scientists are trying to understand why a high percentage of dolphins captured recently are missing all their teeth!

Experts say that until recently, finding a toothless dolphin was an extremely rare occurrence. But of the 124 dolphins captured and brought to the Cooktown Marine Mammal Center over the past six months, an incredible 18 are without a tooth in their heads.

"In the course of its lifetime, the average dolphin may lose one or two teeth," said marine biologist Dr. Rolf Hinkold.

"Nineteen in 124 is an alarming number. We

Beauty sues Texas bar after nearly dying during hot dog eating contest!

READY SET, GO! Most hot dog eating contests are judged on the number of hot dogs a person can eat in the designated time allotted, as shown here

By ARNOLD TURNER

A woman has sued a bar where she says she nearly choked to death in a hot dog eating contest!

Victoria Franks Iles of Baton Rouge, La., names Peter's Wild Life nightclub of Houston, Texas in rough up some cash for injuries she suffered after the hot dog allegedly got stuck in her throat during the contest.

The suit claims she suffered prolonged deprivation of oxygen before someone was able to free the troublesome meat.

The unusual ordeal took place back in March of 1985 when Miss Iles decided to enter a contest to see who could eat a hot dog the fastest. Her attorney claims the bar fostered a "wild festive atmosphere" that contributed to Miss Iles' injury.

The suit states that the greatest possible result of such an event is that "a contestant attempting to win the contest will choke on the hot dog."

The suit doesn't ask for any particular amount but does claim Miss Iles suffered pain, mental anguish, loss of earning capacity, physical impairment and medical and mental health care expenses.

Dumb questions lawyers wished they had never asked!

Most people think of lawyers as brainy, but legal eagles can sometimes ask some pretty boneheaded questions.

Here's a sampler, culled at depositions of real trials and reported in the Massachusetts Bar Association Lawyers Journal:

Q. Were you present when your girlfriend was taken?

Q. Now, doctor, is it true that when a person dies in his sleep he doesn't know about it until the next morning?

Q. You say the stairs went down in the basement. Those stairs, did they go up also?

Q. You are the father of three children, is that true?

Q. How far apart were the vehicles at the time of the collision?

Q. Are you qualified to give a urine sample? Answer: I have been since early childhood.

Q. The youngest son, the 20-year-old, how old is he?

Q. Were you alone or by yourself?

Q. You say you performed the autopsy at around 8:30 p.m. Was Mr. Dennington dead at the

FAMILY EATS

Man killed wife for starting dinner without him!

ALLEGED KILLER Federico Perales (left) is shown his family sat down to dinner without him.

By MICHAEL FORSYTH

FORT WORTH, Texas — Hotheaded Federico Perales was ticked off when his family started to eat dinner without him — so he stabbed his wife to death with a kitchen knife, say cops.

The 35-year-old computer specialist blurted out, "You've pushed me to the limit," before plunging the huge blade into the chest of his wife Sharon, 35, according to his children, who witnessed the horrible crime.

"It's been reported that the couple had a volatile relationship, but there were no previous police calls to their home," said police spokesman Lt. Mark Krey.

The slaughter erupted on a peaceful evening in late April.

"The wife and their two children, a 13-year-old son and 15-year-old daughter, were going about their normal preparations for the meal," revealed Lt. Krey. "Mr. Perales was sleeping on a couch in the living room, but the rest of the family thought he was somewhere else in the house.

"Mrs. Perales twice called out to her husband to come eat dinner but got no response, so they went ahead and started to eat.

"Mr. Perales woke up a short time afterward and became irate that they had gone ahead without him. He got up to eat before he started to berate Mrs. Perales and call her an awful [illegible] names.

The children ran and locked [illegible] but by the time cops got there Mrs. Perales was dead of multiple stab wounds.

When the police arrived, Mr. Perales was sitting on the couch, said Lt. Krey. He admitted killing his wife and told them, 'She drove me to it.' — she made me do it.'

He was arrested and charged with murder.

Water marks appear on Jesus' face!

SHROUD OF TURIN CRYING BLOOD TEARS!

Sacred cloth's weeping has been captured on film!

by BEATRICE DEXTER
World News Editor

The mysterious shroud of Turin is shedding bloody tears, and experts say the tears are proof the linen cloth once wrapped the body of Jesus.

The ancient burial cloth, which dates back to the 1st century A.D., began weeping on Easter Sunday and has cried about four tears an hour, day and night since then.

The tears soak into the fabric and leave trails of blood and salt on the woven cloth.

"There's no doubt about it — the Shroud is definitely crying," said Dr. Marianna Dalli, a specialist in ancient textiles who has carefully examined the miracle cloth. "It is possible to see the tears begin to form on the image on the cloth.

Dr. Marianna Dalli, a textile expert, examines the cloth, bearing a close resemblance to the figure of Jesus Christ. Analysis of the liquid in the tears that are clearly visible on the cloth has revealed that they are made up of human blood and tears.

The Shroud, which is kept in the Cathedral of St. John the Baptist in Turin, Italy, was [illegible] in 1997.

Experts believe it was [illegible] the Crusades and preserved through the centuries by devoted monks until it came to the attention of the Pope in the 14th century.

In 1981, experts using three-dimensional computer analysis confirmed that the Shroud dates to the time of Christ.

"For centuries, the Shroud has never been known to weep," Dr. Dalli said. "And we can only believe this is a sign that Jesus Himself is weeping over the crime, violence and inhumanity in societies around the world.

"The image on the cloth used to appear as though it were sleeping. Now it appears to be in anguish, as if it is in deep emotional pain.

"The weeping is clearly a sign from God that he has [illegible] the Shroud continues to [illegible]

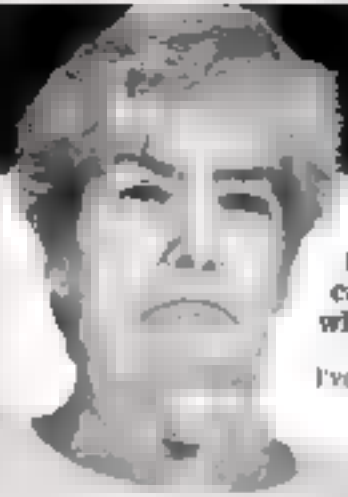
Grenade-toting granny warns muggers:

GO AHEAD, MAKE MY DAY!



By MIKE FOSTER

LOS ANGELES — Street thugs don't mess with feisty 70-year-old grandmother Lillian Hamerling — because she carries a pair of live hand grenades with her wherever she goes!

"No way I'm gonna let some young punk take away the few pennies I've got left," declares the spry senior. "I'll blow 'em to kingdom come first."

Mrs. Hamerling came up with her explosive approach to personal security after she was mugged outside her home last November.

"A couple of teenagers knocked me down, kicked me in the side a few times and ran off with my purse," recalls the widow.

The worst part was getting rubbed off by dignity the cops. "I promised I'd never be treated like that again," she insisted.

Mrs. Hamerling, who has two adult daughters and four grandchildren but lives alone in a rundown South Central neighborhood, turned to her neighbor Joe Apple for help.

He had brought back three grenades from Vietnam as souvenirs and I talked him into letting me have two of them," she explains. He showed me how to pull the pin and everything."

The grenade-toting grandmother first fought with type encounter was just two weeks later. She was accosted by a gunman who dragged her into an alley and ordered her to empty her purse. "I reached into my pocketbook and pulled out a live fifth grenade," she recalls. "I said, 'Here you are, a present.'

"That alone looked like he was going to wet his pants. His eyes bugged out and he took off down the street like a jackrabbit!"

Since then Mrs. Hamerling has brandished her weapons three more times and has become known in the area as the "Grenade Lady."

The would-be muggers give her a wide berth. Even policemen tread her arrangements. But she vows to hold on to them. "The cops can have my grenades when they pry them out of my cold, dead hands."

DEATH OF A HERO!

Dog that woke up comatose boy dies of heart attack!

By MICHAEL FORSYTH · Weekly World News

"Rusty, My Hero."

These simple words, inscribed on the tombstone of a loyal dog who recently passed away, sum up the deep gratitude a boy feels for the mutt whose love brought him back from death's door.

Six years ago, then 10-year-old Danny Tomel lay helpless in a coma — until his frisky puppy Rusty leaped into his life and woke him up.

The two remained inseparable companions until a few weeks ago, when the young pooch died of a sudden heart attack. Danny was devastated, but he coped with his beloved pet running unbridled.

"Rusty is still in Danny's heart — and as long as he is, Rusty will always be alive," says Judy Wang, dog warden of West Sioux Cove, where the conversation was recorded.

The drama began in 1991 with a freak car accident.

"Danny was standing at a bus stop playing ball with some friends when he stepped backward into the street and was hit by a motorcycle his big sister Angela Hernandez, 22.

"The youngster suffered severe head injuries and fell into a deep, comatose state that lasted two weeks.

"We rushed him to the hospital and talked to him to try to get a response, hoping that he'd hear a day at the ballgame," says Angela.

But nothing worked — we could only whisper encouragement to Danny and hope that he'd get just as much out of it.

"Whenever we spoke Rusty's name, Danny would begin to stir — as if he knew that really loved that puppy."

Desperate for a miracle, the family arranged hospital officials to allow the dog to lick the boy's face.

Danny was in dreadful shape, being fed intravenously and kept breathing with the aid of a respirator. Doctors said they'd done all they could, and Danny's fate was in God's hands.

Then the miracle happened. Danny was playing with his puppy when Rusty suddenly jumped up and began licking his face.

Danny was so thrilled that he asked if he could have Rusty moved to his hospital room. The request was granted, and Danny and the pup were back in business.

Danny was so depressed when Rusty died that doctors were afraid he would suffer a relapse. But the boy's family rallied around him, and he was soon back on the road to recovery.

Danny and the dog's mother, Angela, have been the best of friends, doing everything together.

But that ended recently when Rusty collapsed on the porch while barking at a stray dog approaching the house.

Danny was so distraught that he asked if he could have Rusty buried in the backyard

PASSION & MATRIMONY: People around the world are searching for the perfect mate and hoping for the perfect relationship.

By SUSAN GORDEN / World News Service

You can find Mr. or Miss Right by following some simple advice from a romance consultant.

"With the correct strategies, anyone can be successfully married in about two years," declared Suzanne Brierley, whose company Romanceworks conducts seminars for singles seeking love and marriage.

Here are her tips.

It takes two years to find your perfect mate!

● Make getting married a goal as important as your education or career. "If you wanted to be a doctor, you wouldn't expect to wake up one day and be a surgeon," she said. So take control of your personal life and decide what changes you can make to attract love and commitment.

● Compile a list of qualities you'd like in a mate. Figure out which ones are essential to your happiness and which are less important. Don't waste time with people who don't meet your needs.

● Line up dates through a variety of sources, including personal ads, singles clubs, friends and co-workers.

● Date only people who are looking for a relationship that could blossom into marriage. If it becomes clear that the person doesn't want to commit, start dating others.

● In the early stages of the relationship, don't pressure the other person by demanding commitment too soon.

● End a relationship with anyone else who won't date you exclusively after five months.

● If you want children, date only people who feel the same.

● Avoid people who intimidate you or put you down in front of your friends.

● Beware of people who are constantly unemployed, dissatisfied with their jobs or ask you for money.

● Stay away from people who constantly find fault in others. "This behavior allows them to remain unrecognized," said Mrs. Brierley.

● Don't date anyone who is sexually promiscuous. "You can't afford to go to bed with someone until you've both agreed to stop seeing other people and you've been tested for AIDS," the expert said.

● Give yourself time to fall in love before you start a sexual relationship.

● Don't move in with someone you're dating if you want to be married. The other person may be less inclined to marry you when you're so easily available.

Marriage

guide to romance in the '90s

TRANSWORLD NEWS SERVICE

Many "facts" about love and marriage are really just old wives' tales, reveals psychiatrist Dr. William Appleton.

Here are some of the most common myths about love and marriage, and the truth behind them:

MYTHS and FACTS ABOUT LOVE & MARRIAGE

MYTH: Couples considering marriage should first test their compatibility by living together.

FACT: Even a good live-in relationship is no assurance the marriage will work, because marriage vows change the couple's psychological makeup. They're no longer "playing house" and some people feel trapped. Statistics show the divorce rate isn't any lower among couples who went through a "trial run."

MYTH: Honesty in love is always the best policy.

FACT: There are certain things partners should not tell each other. For example, you shouldn't tell your wife she's looking old. And the disclosure of certain secrets, such as an affair, can forever cripple your mate's ability to love you as much as before.

MYTH: Sharing religious beliefs or a cultural heritage isn't important to a union's success.

FACT: Studies have shown that marriages are more apt to break up when there's an important difference between the partners such as race, religion or ethnic origin.

MYTH: Romantic love — and especially sexual passion — is essential to a relationship only in its early stages.

FACT: To keep the relationship alive and long-lasting, maintaining that early romantic spark is vital.

MYTH: Showing a partner's low self-esteem with constant praise is far better than criticism.

FACT: Undeserved praise can reinforce your mate's feelings of inadequacy, so make your criticism both positive and negative. For example, encouraging your partner's dieting efforts with kind words is better than saying that he or she looks great when it isn't true.

MYTH: True love means always giving in to your mate's wishes.

FACT: Some compromise is essential in a good relationship, but constantly giving in can lead to resentment and low self-esteem.

Watching soaps can add sparkle to your love life!

Watching soap operas can put a bubbly shine on your love life — whether you're single or married, an expert says.

"Listen to the latest soaps watch," said communications specialist Dr. Mary Cassata.

"They can improve a good love life — or spruce up a dull one — by helping you learn how to flirt, seduce and how to hold onto them."

According to Dr. Cassata, soap operas can teach you:

● That love isn't just for the young and the healthy. "There are lots of older women in love relationships on soaps," said Dr. Cassata, author of Life on Daytime Television.

● How to handle the opposite sex. "Soaps can teach you how to look and even what to talk about with the opposite sex," said Dr. Cassata.

● That being faithful pays off. In soaps, characters who have adulterous affairs or break up other people's marriages end up suffering.

● To discuss your feelings. Soap characters talk about their anger. They don't hold things in — and you shouldn't, either.

● That divorce isn't the easy way out of marital problems. "Divorce on soap operas is always painful. Soap characters try to work things out whenever possible. If you see that divorce isn't an easy way out, you'll work harder at saving your own marriage."

LOVING COUPLE: Kristina Alfonso and Peter Reckell play Hope and Bo on Days of Our Lives.

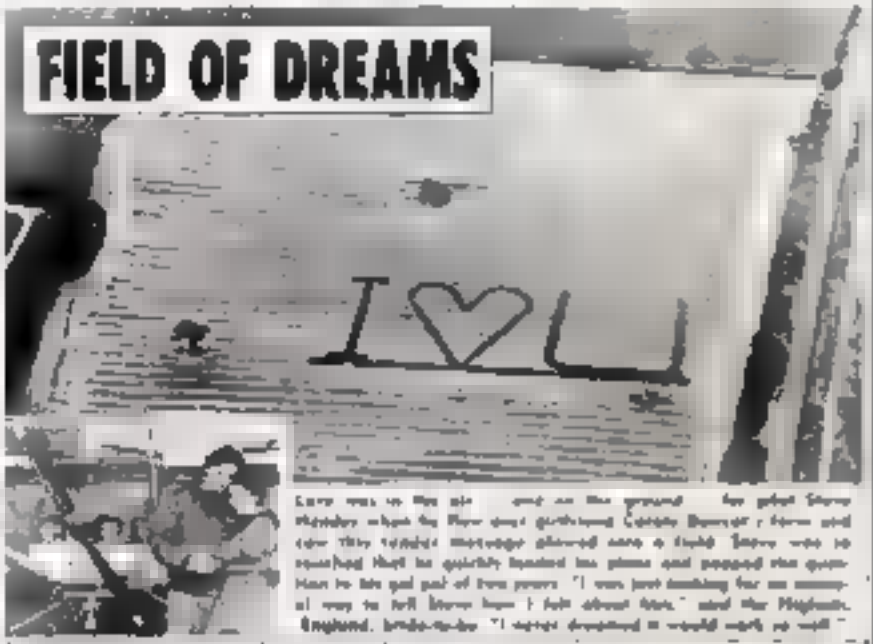
FIELD OF DREAMS



Love was in the air ... and on the ground ... for pilot Steve Fletcher when he flew over gridlocked Canary Wharf, Essex and saw this wonderful message glowed onto a field. Steve was so touched that he quickly landed his plane and popped the question to his girl pal of two years. "I was just looking for an unusual way to tell Sharon how I felt about her," said the Maghull, England, bride-to-be. "I never dreamed it would work so well."

How to tell if it's really TRUE LOVE!

By Judith Stewart
Weekly World News

WHEN YOU'RE REALLY in love, you can't imagine living with anyone else.

Is it true love — or infatuation?

It might seem almost impossible to tell the difference between the two, but it can be done, says an expert.

"In any new relationship, you can tell it's true love mainly by analyzing your attitude and behavior not only toward that special someone, but toward life in general," said psychologist Dr. Herbert Freudenberger.

Here are some of the tell-tale signs of real love:

● "You'll find yourself in a perpetual good mood. You might whistle while you work or sing in the shower. Little annoyances will not bother you as much," said Dr. Freudenberger, a respected author.

● You let your guard down and feel free to be yourself. "True love allows people to be themselves in the company of the one they love," said Dr. Freudenberger.

"When you're infatuated with someone, you go out of your way to present just the right image of yourself."

But when it's true love, you feel free to express your opinions about anything and you're not afraid to let your loved one see you with your hair mussed or without makeup.

● You notice a shift in your attitude toward single life. Going to a party on your own isn't the nightmare. Flirting with the opposite sex isn't as exciting.

Being alone doesn't seem independent anymore, it just feels plain lonely. Children seem less troublesome.

● You can't imagine being with anyone else. You stop looking at other single people as potential dates and realize that no one compares to your new love.

● You enjoy physical affection more. "Your hand will fit inside his like a glove. Having your arm around her will be as natural as breathing," said Dr. Freudenberger.

What women REALLY want from a man!

By JANE GILLAN / Weekly World News

Women are sick of wimps — they'd rather romance "Dirty Harry" Clint Eastwood than sensitive singer Michael Bolton any day!

That's just one of the things top pollsters Brat'chai Istovich Partners discovered when they questioned 1,000 men and women to find out about relationships in the '90s.

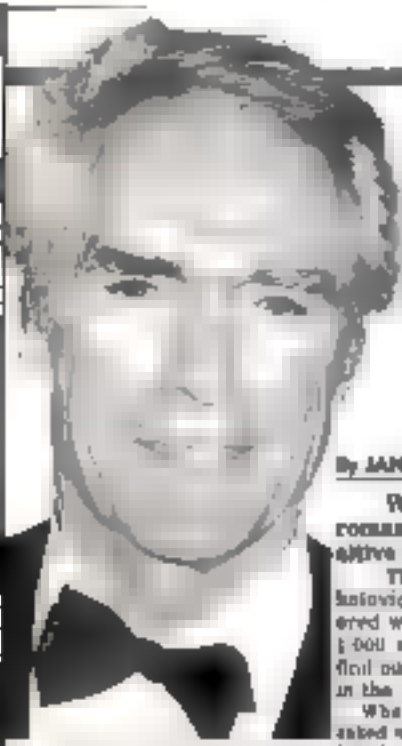
When the researchers asked women which man they found more attractive — Clint or Michael — an overwhelming 64 percent selected the rugged screen star. Other findings among women:

- 59 percent of them like it when a man opens a door for them.
- 69 percent feel protected when they're with their man.
- 74 percent believe the man should pick up the check on a first date.
- 79 percent like to wear sexy clothes for their man.
- 80 percent find a casually dressed man sexier than one wearing a suit and tie.

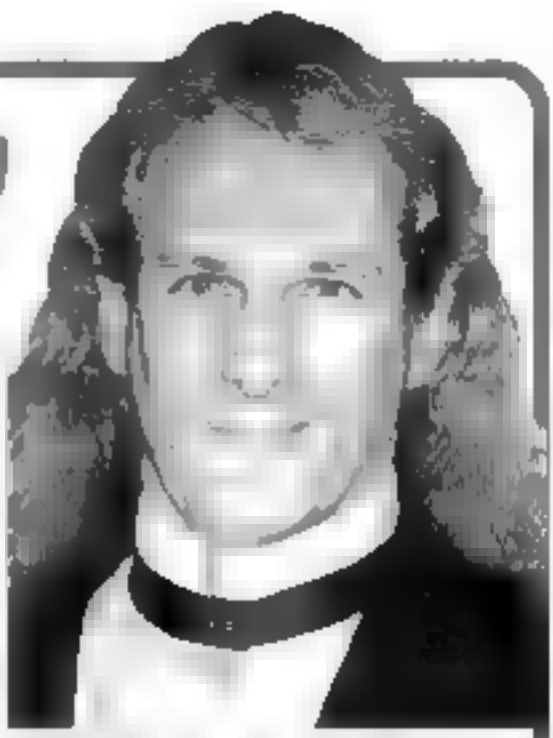
Although 71 percent of men would rather drive a sleek sports car, a surprising 68 percent of women find the pickup more appealing.

And all this should be great news for the "man in the '90s," because 80 percent of the guys interviewed said they would rather be like Clint — and 86 percent identified themselves as "manly men."

But "Macho" has made a comeback in a big way. Only 44 percent of the guys identified with the "politically correct man" who's in tune with feminist beliefs and considers women equals in every aspect of life.



WOMEN'S CHOICE: Macho actor Clint Eastwood.



EASY SELECT: Sensitive male like singer Michael Bolton.

Put sizzle in your sex life with your wedding photos!

If you want to put sexual sizzle back into a dull marriage, just pull out your old wedding and honeymoon photos!

When couples look at these pictures together, it brings back memories of the early days of marriage and increases sexual excitement, experts say.

Test yourself This quiz can help spice up your love life

How sensuous are you?

To discover the answer, choose one response for each question in this quiz designed by psychologist Dr. Tracy Cabot for Weekly World News readers. Then tally your score and check it against the answer key at the end.

But before you start, Dr. Cabot, author of Marrying Lover, Marrying Smarter cautions "Sexual and sensuous are not the same thing - someone could look really sexy, but not be sensuous.

"Sensuous people enjoying the pleasures of sensation — and sensuous people make great lovers."

1. My choice for bedtime dress would be a) nothing, because being nude is sexy, b) skimpy underwear because it's enticing, c) flannel pajamas because they feel good.

2. I prefer to take a) a long shower, b) a short shower, c) a long bath.

3. I like listening to music a) as background while I work, b) hardly at all, c) with nothing else to distract me.

4. I think sleeping late is a) all right once in a while, b) a waste of time, c) great to do as often as I can.

5. I enjoy going for rides a) because I like to get out of the house, b) just to get where I'm going, c) to enjoy the scenery.

6. When it comes to how long it takes me to eat, I a) am not concerned with how fast I eat, b) eat quickly, c) linger over every morsel.

7. I put on perfume, cologne or after-shave a) whenever I'm going to be with people, b) hardly ever, c) almost every day.

8. I prefer to a) go people watching, b) watch a construction project, c) watch the waves and listen to the waves.

9. My favorite season is a) fall, b) summer, c) spring.

10. I would rather be a) at a busy store where I can watch kids play, b) at a clothing store where I can see cute items, c) at a bakery where I can bask in the smells.

SCORING. Give yourself two points for each "c" answer, one point for each "b" answer and no points for "a" answers. Then add up your total.

If you scored: 14 or more points — you are a sensuous person. You enjoy the pleasures of your body and are probably a great lover.

8-13 points — you're average in sensuousness. You could have more pleasure in life if you pay more attention to your five senses.

0-7 points — you need to get more in touch with your body by trying new sensual experiences, such as massage. There have been plenty of books written to help you become more sensual and the reference librarian at your local library can help you find them.

JURY USES OUIJA BOARD TO CONVICT MAN OF MURDER!

By ALEX MORGAN Weekly World News

DORTMUND, Germany — A furious judge has thrown out a guilty verdict in a highly publicized murder trial — after he found out the jury used a Ouija board to reach its decision!

Judge Karl Schlendt has even threatened to fine or possibly jail the jurors on contempt charges.

"To use a child's toy to determine a man's fate like this is an outrage," Judge Schlendt said to the jurors. "You have shown total disrespect to the judicial system."

The seven men and five women jurors had listened to testimony for nine weeks before returning a guilty verdict against Peter Gurndel, who was accused of killing his wife and her lover.

Jury member Ada Bauer said the jury was hopelessly deadlocked when one of them proposed using the Ouija board. "Judge Schlendt doesn't understand how bad it was getting in that jurors' room," she said. "We were screaming at one another and no one would give in."

In fact, the jury had notified the judge they were stuck but he certainly instructed them they needed to get back to work and reach a verdict.

Mrs. Bauer said before the Ouija board was used there was a silent agreement reached among the jurors.

"We all said we'd go along with whatever the Ouija board revealed," she said.

The jury's [illegible] probably would have remained a secret if it hadn't been for a bailiff who informed the judge just a few hours after the guilty verdict was announced.

"The bailiff knew that they had used the Ouija board but he thought [illegible] verdict was regular," Judge Schlendt said. "He apparently considered not revealing what had happened but he realized that he was legally required to report the irregularity."

Judge Schlendt was forced to declare a mistrial in the case and said Gurndel will be retried in July. Possible charges against the jurors will be determined by the end of the month.

SANITY verdict handed down in the Ouija board was thrown out by Judge Schlendt.

Pencil prank goes wrong — punctures kid's colon!

ERIE, Pa. — Kids are no longer allowed to use pencils on school buses after a prank playing third grader held a pencil upright on a bus seat yesterday to stick another boy on the bus unawares as the boy sat down on the seat. The pencil entered his anus and went all the way up into his rectum. The point punctured the boy's colon and dug into his small intestine, necessitating [illegible] grueling hours of surgery to repair the damage.

The Erie Area School District has now banned the use of pencils and pens on school buses.

BIZARRE BIRTH!

Woman has babies for two couples — at the same time!

MEGA-MOM Kay LeCreels, left, hands newborn baby Dinah to proud parents Stacy and Len Markano.

Baby #1

By JOE BERGER
Weekly World News

NEW YORK CITY — Kindhearted Kay LeCreels became the queen of surrogate moms when she gave birth to two bouncing babies belonging to two separate couples — in the same afternoon!

Kid-crazy Kay, 28, delivered bubbly, blue-eyed Dinah Louise Markano at 2:37 p.m. on May 14, then brought strapping little Samuel Len Lasso into the world 18 minutes later.

"The doctors tell me this is the first time anything like this has ever happened, and I'm very proud of what I've done — because I know I've made two wonderful couples extremely happy," gushed the single secretary.

"Just seeing the joy in their eyes when the nurses presented them with their babies was probably the biggest thrill of my life."

Amazing Kay's excursion into the world of surrogate motherhood began when longtime friends Len and Stacy Markano asked her to help them have the baby they could not have on their own.

"We wanted a child so bad we could taste it, but after two miscarriages, my doctor told me I could never carry a baby to term," elated Stacy, 28, said later.

"So Len and I talked it over and decided we'd ask Kay to do it for us.

"When we finally got up the nerve to ask her, she was pretty shocked. I could tell. But she knew how much it meant to us so she said yes — and after that, we all just plunged ahead.

"The doctors took one of my eggs, fertilized with Len's sperm, and implanted it in Kay's womb. And VOILA! — little Dinah was on her way." But good-natured Kay's pregnancy took a bizarre twist a day later when fertility doctors asked her to bear a baby for frantic Daniel and Diana Lasso as well.

SURROGATE MOM Kay carried these two babies for two separate couples.

"I didn't know Dan and Diana back then, but I met with them and I could see how much they wanted a baby," the accommodating lady recalled.

"So when the doctor told me I could carry the Markanos' baby and the Lassos' baby at the same time, I said I'd give it a shot."

Baby #2

SAFE Samuel meets his new parents Daniel and Diana Lasso as Kay, right, looks on.

Kay's decision to help the two couples was made easier by the fact that she was already pregnant with her own baby when fertility doctors asked her to help the Lassos.

"I won't say it wasn't hard, because I was pretty uncomfortable there for a few months," said vivacious Kay, who refused to accept a dime for her doubling feat.

"But I wouldn't have passed up the chance for anything.

"And now that I know what a wonderful experience motherhood is, I can't wait to find the right guy when the remarkable mom gave birth to 7-pound, 9-ounce Dinah and 6-pound, 6-ounce Samuel in one glorious afternoon.
